Listening to Your Kids. "You are much more likely to get a child to listen to you if first you listen to them," he says. "My golden rule is, 'When you have trouble with a child, listen to them. Communication is a key factor in any relationship, especially those with children. Active listening is a communication skill that can bring greater connection, clarity and understanding to build positive relationships with children. Listening it's not as easy as it sounds. It's often uncomfortable to really hear somebody else's point of view (especially if it's your child and she's right and you happen to be wrong. It could happen, you know!). You might hear something you don't want to hear. Listen to Children Opening the Hearts of Children Through Active Listening Since , Listen to Children has mentored hundreds of children in Palm Beach County. Between and , we have served children.

Listening, as it is, is a difficult thing. And to think of listening to your child seems a daunting task. Add to that the fact that when the child needs to be listened, and you may have another things running on your mind wanting you to just jump off your seat right now. Active listening is a good way to improve your communication with your child. It lets your child know you are interested in what she has to say and want to hear more. When you are actively listening, you give your full attention to your child.
